Errors of extinction

A University of Queensland study has found that a third of all mammal species declared extinct in the past few centuries are alive.

Some species hid for 80 years only to reappear within four years of being named extinct.

Dr Diana Fisher identified 187 species lost since 1500, 67 of which were rediscovered.

She questioned how some species are classified as extinct.